YEsterday the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City of London, waited on his Majesty at St. James's; when Thomas Garrard, Esq; Common Serjeant of the City of London, (in the Absence of Mr. Recorder) presented the following humble Address to his Majesty. They were introduced by his Grace the Duke of Grafton, Lord Chamberlain.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

Most gracious Sovereign,

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled, humbly beg leave to embrace this our first Opportunity of congratulating your Majesty on the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with the illustrious Princess of Saxe-Gotha; a Princess whose early Virtues have received the most glorious Testimony, your Majesty's Approbation.

Those Virtues, confirm'd and improv'd by the happy Influence of her Majesty's bright Example, will, we doubt not, reflect Honour on your Majesty's Choice, and prove her Royal Highness worthy of the high Station to which she is called.

With the sincerest Sentiments of Duty and Gratitude we ascribe these happy Nuptials to your Majesty's paternal Care and Concern for the future as well as present Happiness and Security of your People.

What Blessings may we not hope for from the Alliance of two Houses, which have been so long conspicuous for their steady Adherence to the Protestant Interest, and their glorious Zeal in the Defence of civil and religious Liberty.

The Joy we feel on this Occasion, can receive Addition only by anticipating the Happiness of our Posterity, to whom these auspicious Nuptials promise a long Continuance of those Blessings which we thankfully enjoy under your Majesty's most just and gracious Government.

We beg Leave to express our hearty Wishes, that your Majesty may live to see these Presages of your faithful Subjects confirm'd by their Royal Highnesses being bless'd with a numerous Progeny; and to assure your Majesty, that we shall do every thing in our respective Stations which may any Way contribute to the Ease, Security and Glory of your Majesty's Reign.

To which Address his Majesty was pleased to make the following most gracious Answer.

I Thank you for your dutiful and loyal Address; the Satisfaction you express on the Marriage of my Son, and the Sense you shew of my Care and Concern for the Happiness of my People, are very acceptable to me. The City of London may always depend upon the Continuance of my Favour and Protection.

They all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

Then

(Price Four Pence.)

Then they were introduced to the Queen by the Right Honourable the Earl of Grantham, her Majesty's Lord Chamberlain, and the Common Serjeant made their Compliments to Her Majesty as follows.

May it please your Majesty,

THE Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Councilmen of the City of London, beg leave to congratulate your Majesty on the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with the illustrious Princess of Saxe Gotha.

They could not but form the highest Ideas of a Princess recommended by your Majesty, and adopted by our most gracious Sovereign into the Royal Family. It is her Royal Highness's present Honour to answer those Ideas, to engage the Attention, and command the Veneration of all that approach her: It will be her future Glory to shew the succeeding Age a Copy of the Virtues which this Alliance will give her Royal Highness Opportunity to observe and Ambition to imitate.

May her Royal Highness long enjoy the Advantage of your Majesty's most excellent Pattern, the Nation the Benefit of your Royal Goodness, and latest Posterity the happy Consequences of this auspicious Event.

Her Majesty was pleased to receive them very graciously, and they all had the Honour to kiss Her Majesty's Hand.

After which they were introduced to their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, by the Right Hon. the Marquess of Carnarvon, and the Common Serjeant made their Compliments as follows.

To the Prince.

May it please your Royal Highness,

THE Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Councilmen of the City of London, beg Leave to congratulate your Royal Highness on your Marriage with the Princess of Saxe Gotha.

The Virtues of an Heir are next in Consequence to those which adorn the Possessor of a Throne; and by the many great Virtues you have copied from your Royal Father, your Highness is the future Hope of the Nation; and there wanted nothing but a Prospect of Perpetuity to compleat their Happiness. Your Royal Highness, by the present happy Alliance, gives them this agreeable View, and their Joy is so much the greater, as it flows from a Princess designed by every great and engaging Accomplishment for the Honour of your Royal Highness's Affection.

May your Royal Highness long enjoy the present Happiness, and an illustrious Succession of your Royal Race convey the Prosperity of the Nation to remotest Ages.

To which his Royal Highness was pleased to return the following Answer.

My Lord and Gentlemen,

YOUR reiterated Congratulations to me and the Princess are very acceptable to us. I have always had the sincerest Affection for the City, but it is greatly increas'd by all the Marks of Attachment you shew me on this Occasion. I hope you will be persuaded of my constant Regard for the Happiness of the Nation in general, and yours in particular, which has and always will consist in the Preservation of our Trade and our Constitution.

To the Princess

May it please your Royal Highness,

THE Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Councilmen of the City of London, beg Leave to congratulate your Royal Highness on your Marriage with his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

Your Interest Madam is now the same with that of your illustrious Consort; governed by his Inclinations, you partake his Regard for the Welfare and Happiness of the People; permit these his Majesty's faithful Subjects to assure your Royal Highness of the most affectionate Returns.

May your Royal Highness enjoy that Happiness, which your Alliance to so amiable a Prince, your high Station, and those Virtues which have so eminently distinguished your Highness, conspire to give you; and may the Blessings we now enjoy, by being governed by the best of Kings, be transmitted by your Royal Highness to after Ages.

They were received very graciously, and they all had the Honour to kiss their Royal Highnesses Hands.

The following Address of the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the Three Denominations in and about the Cities of London and Westminster, has been presented to his Majesty by Mr. Wilson, attended by several of his Brethren. They were introduced by his Grace the Duke of Newcastle one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, and they all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

We cannot ſufficiently admire his Majeſty's Wiſdom in the Choice of a Princeſs ſo eminent for great and amiable Qualities, ſo illuſtrious by her Birth, and deſcended from that heroick and magnanimous Elector of Saxony, who firſt proteſted againſt the Encroachments of papal Tyranny, and the Superſtitions of the Church of Rome. This muſt be peculiarly agreeable to your Majeſty, whoſe diſtinguiſhed Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion has been rewarded by remarkable Bleſſings from Heaven, and endeared you to the whole Kingdom. Your Concern, Madam, for the pious Education of the Children of your Royal Houſe, has been obſerved with Pleaſure by all the Friends of Religion and Virtue. May the Royal Pair be long a Bleſſing to your ſelf, to our gracious Queen, and to theſe Nations; and may kind Heaven, alike propitious to your Majeſty and to us, continue ſtill to keep it in Suſpence, whether your Majeſty ſhall more earneſtly promote the Happineſs of your People, or they more zealouſly ſhew their Duty and Attachment to your Royal Perſon and Family.

Theſe are the ardent Wiſhes and Deſires of, may it pleaſe your Majeſty, your Majeſty's moſt loyal and obedient Subjects.
